the right-hand side of the uprights, so as to be out of the way of the staff or handle, which can be of any length to suit the operator. The bevel is fastened on the uprights with one common screw at the further end of the level. The other end opposite is fastened onto the upright by cutting a narrow slot hole in shown on the drawing. There must be great accuracy in putting the level upon the uprights to have the bottom of the "This shopping business is an awful disance."

Hams, Shoulders and level and the bottom of the straight edge exactly parallel. When you are getting the grade or fall of ditch to the rod by raising or lowering the rear end of the level by taking the difference on a straight line with the bottom of the level measured down at each extreme end of he straight edge, you can tell just what incline your ditch will have per rod mulof the level was three eights of an inch, the fall in the ditch per rod would be twelve-eights, equal to 1½ inches, as the straight edge is one-fourth of 16½ feet. Always drive the tile tight at the top of the joint to keep out all the loose dirt. My experience teaches me that the water always enters the tile at the bottom. Always use a scoop to fit the size of the tile, then, when you fill in, the dirt will not crowd the tile out of line. In setting the level for work, have the incline so as to have the bubble always occupy the center of the opening of the level. In so doing you seldom require the services of a surveyor.-Prairie Farmer.

tional Demand for Federal Aid

The state grange of Maryland is the first of the state granges to follow the National grange in demanding that the government aid in improving the highways. At a fully attended meeting in Baltimore recently a strong resolution on this subject was adopted, and Master . B. Ager in his annual address said:

"There seem to be great interest at this time all over the state in regard to good roads. It is said that the government has expended $500,000,000 in Improving the rivers and harbors and proposes to spend $200,000,000 in building the isthmian canal. Therefore we believe something should be appropriated to assist the farmers in building permanent high-

"According to Secretary Wilson's report the farmers have aided the government very materially. Discussing the balance of trade, the secretary says that the favorable balance of trade to the credit of this country is due entirely to the farmers. The balance of trade in the farm products during the last 14 years, no year excepted, aggregated $4,-$06,000,000 in products. Other than the the balance of trade was adverse to this country to the extent of $865,000,000. Our farmers not only canceled this immense obligation, but placed $3,940,000,-000 to the credit of the nation, when the books of the international exchanges were balanced. He concludes that it is the farmers that have paid the foreign bondholders. Now, why should not the government aid the farmers in the construction of roads? It is shown by careful estimates that it cost $900,000,000 to haul the products of the farm to railway stations, rivers and canals, which is vastly more than it costs to maintain 200,000 miles of railway, and by careful estimates the cost could be reduced one-half. I have no doubt that on some roads tt could be reduced much more.

Weeds Along Rondsides. Some states that have laws that require the removal or destruction of weeds by the wayside roads are insisting on atrict enforcement of the law. It is a question whether the farmer or the overseer of the highways or road com-missioners should do the work of weed destruction. In some states railroad are compelled by law to destroy all dangerous weeds under penalty. Roadsides are a pregnant source for distributing weed nulsances on farmers' fields.
